QUESTION AS TO VETOES.

It Is Decided That They Cannot Be Referred to Committees-The Matter of Appeals Discussed in the House-New Measures.

The Senate was in session nearly three hours yesterday, and considerable business was disposed of, though there was nothing of an interesting nature in the proceedings. There was some little discussion in the morning hour as to what disposition should be made of the Governor's message vetoing the bill to incorporate the Berkley Street Raliway Company. The question under discussion was merely as to the rules governing the body in the treatment of such communications, whether the message could first be referred to a committee or should be acted upon by the body without such reference Mr. Wickham clearly showed that the matter as to the passage of the bill was sefere the Senate, and that a reference to a committee would be improper, and the Chair sustained him in this. The measage was then ordered to be laid upon the table and printed, in order that the members might vote intelligently as to whether the objections raised by the Executive were sufficient to justify the defeat of the bill.

The bill to incorporate the Basic City,

The bill to incorporate the Basic City, Bridgewater, Piedmont Electric Rallway Company, which was vetoed by the Gov-ernor, came up on its passage, and was defeated, only Mr. Claytor voting not to FIVE NEW OYSTER BILLS.

FIVE NEW OYSTER BILLS.

Mr. Jones introduced five bills in relation to the culture of oysters. The object of these measures is to abolish the office of inspector, and confer his duties upon the treasurers of the countles in Tidewat*; for the protection of surveyors of oyster-grounds while in the discharge of their duties; to direct county courts to order a survey of oyster-grounds in proper cases, and to prohibit the taking of oysters during the hours from sunset to sunrise.

Some of those who were consulted on the most important of the five bills introduced yesterday by Mr. Jones say:
The general tendency of this bill is toward more liberal and enlightened legislation; it is not radical in any respect; it follows established paths, but broadens them; it abolishes the oyster inspectors, who, besides other duties, are entressed with the collection of the overter revenues.

The total oyster revenue collected for the fiscal year ending September 33, 1833, amounted to about $3,000. The fees and commissions of the inspectors to collect the stated $31,000 amounted to about $15,000-that is to say, every dollar col-lected cost nearly 50 cents to collect. THE FEATURES OF THE MEASURE.

THE FEATURES OF THE MEASURE.

Its main features, aside from the abolition of the costly inspector system, are to raise a moderate but sufficient revenue to pay all expenses for enforcing laws, and to leave a small surplus to the Treasury of the State. It is estimated that this surplus will not be over $40,000; it may be no more than $25,000, depending upon the enforcement of the revenue laws, but whether $25,000 or $40,000; or double either amount, it will represent what Virginia will get for the use of property, both natural rock and barren area, which, if rented or leased to the highest resident both natural rock and barren area, which, if rented or leased to the highest resident bidders, would probably afford Virginia a revenue of half a million dollars.

Another feature of the Jones bill is the rafeguarding of the title of a planter to his oyater-ground; it provides for a record, which is almost as easily traced as properly under the Australian block system. Another is that it confers industrial freedom opon oyster planters. It abolishes dredging, because the oyater rocks have been so weakened by it that to be preserved they must not be dredged for some years. No instrument other than ordinary oyster tongs are permitted, which gives the oyster-tongers of Virginia undisputed working rights over about 20,600 acres of natural oyster rock.

tongs are permitted, which gives the oyster-tongers of Virginia undisputed working rights over about 201,000 acres of natural oyster rock.

The Jones bill, it is claimed, opens the area of the Chesapeake bay proper to non-redidents. The Jones legislation has for its chief object, those gentlemen claim, the purpose of bringing the splendid resources of the Chesapeake under the dominion of law, order, enterprise, and taxation. Those whose counsel has been usked in framing it believe that, it dominion of law, clude, charter, that taxation. Those whose counsel has been asked in framing it believe that, if adopted, it will place Virginia in the foremost rank of oyster-producing States.

The second bill makes it unlawful for any person to carry or attempt to carry out of the State any seed oysters taken or caught upon any of the natural rock beds or shoads within the jurisdiction of this Sinte, and provides that a violation of this act that it be punished by a fine of not less than 500 nor mote than $50, or punishment in the jail not less than four nor more than six months.

The bill for the protection of county surveyors when in the discharge of duties imposed by law provides that it shall be enlawful for any person to threaten, resist or in any manner interfere with a county surveyor in the performance of the duties imposed upon him by the provisions of the laws relating to the assignment of oyster locations. A violation of the provisions of this measure shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500, or imprisonment in jail not less than six nor more than twelve months.

Miss D'Arville is an artist of many excellent qualities, who has combined in her art acting as well as singing, something which is very rare in prima donnas. She has ingratiated herself with the music-loving public, and does not try to carry all of the entertainment herself, as she is surrounded by a company of unusual excellence, the players having roles suited to their individual talents, and all possible scope is given them for the entertainment of the auditors. Among the ensemble is George C. Bonitace, Jr., who is always humorous in anything he undertakes; Miss Alice Gaillard is the comedienne, and is well known here, baving been seen many times in pretentions organizations. Hilda Hollins and Maud Hollins are also with the company, Mauri Hollins are also with the company, and Cute McDonald is a well-known en-tertainer; Horace W.
